Flag Etiquette – Standards of Respect

The Flag Code, which formalizes and unifies the traditional ways in which we give respect to the flag, also contains specific instructions on how the flag is not to be used. They are:

- The flag should never be dipped to any person or thing. It is flown upside down only as a distress signal.
- The flag should not be used as a drapery, or for covering a speakers desk, draping a platform, or for any decoration in general. Bunting of blue, white and red stripes is available for these purposes. The blue stripe of the bunting should be on the top.
- The flag should never be used for any advertising purpose. It should not be embroidered, printed or otherwise impressed on such articles as cushions, handkerchiefs, napkins, boxes, or anything intended to be discarded after temporary use. Advertising signs should not be attached to the staff or halyard
- The flag should not be used as part of a costume or athletic uniform, except that a flag patch may be used on the uniform of military personnel, fireman, policeman and members of patriotic organizations.
- The flag should never have placed on it, or attached to it, any mark, insignia, letter, word, number, figure, or drawing of any kind.
- The flag should never be used as a receptacle for receiving, holding, carrying, or delivering anything.

When the flag is lowered, no part of it should touch the ground or any other object; it should be received by waiting hands and arms. To store the flag it should be folded neatly and ceremoniously.

The flag should be cleaned and mended when necessary.

When a flag is so worn it is no longer fit to serve as a symbol of our country, it should be destroyed by burning in a dignified manner.

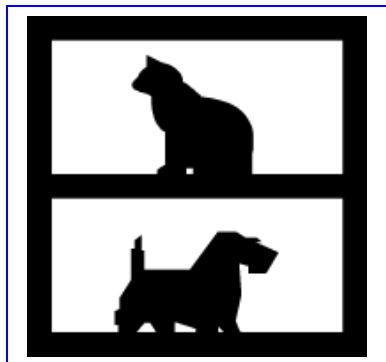

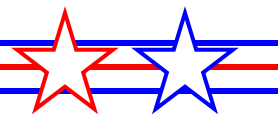

Note: The Flag retirement ceremony will take place on Flag Day, Tuesday, June 14 at 7 PM. at the American Legion Hall. This is also the Army's birthday.

Department of Motor Vehicles
DMV to Change License and ID Renewal Process for All Holders
Agency to Offer ID Verification Program

People Will Have Choice on Whether to Have Identity Verified

The Connecticut Department of Motor Vehicles will start a new program in the fall to offer verified identity protection to people renewing driver licenses and DMV issued identification cards.

The department will ask renewing customers whether they want to show original identity documents to establish an historical record of their identity with the agency as well as for federal identification purposes. Customers can also decline the verification and simply get a regular driver's license or ID card. Through the program, called Select CT ID, people verifying will get a gold star on the license or ID card. Those declining will have one stamped "Not for Federal Identification." Those without verification could face extra federal screening under a proposed program slated to go into effect in 2017 for airports and federal buildings and that also could be used for possible commercial transactions.

The program stems from national identification standards resulting from the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks in the U.S. It is also designed to offer residents additional protection against identity theft by having a historical record of proven original identity documents shown to DMV.

The overall program in brief:

- The program, which begins October 3, will be phased in during the next six years as all licenses and ID cards come up for renewal. The renewal date is on the front of the card.
- People wanting a license or ID card indicating their identity was verified by DMV will need to present certain original documents like a birth certificate, a valid U.S. passport or other primary documents, proof of name changes including as a result of marriage, divorce, etc. as well as of current address.
- Anyone not wanting this verification can simply decline and renew their regular license or DMV-issued ID card. If someone declines, a valid U.S. passport can serve the same purpose as the verified license or ID card at federal screening checkpoints.
- Non-U.S. citizens who request the identity check must show various identity documents and legal presence in the U.S. that DMV will verify online. Without legal presence, DMV will not renew the driver's license or DMV-issued ID card.
- Anyone with a renewed license can drive legally regardless of whether an identity check is done.
- Complete information about the program, including the kinds of identification needed, can be found at ct.gov/selectCTid

This identity protection and verification program is a one-time review of original identity documents. This new program will be available in all DMV and AAA offices. DMV is announcing the program today to help people who have fall renewal dates prepare now by obtaining documents they might need when renewing a driver's license or DMV-issued ID card.

In addition, DMV beginning May 10 will periodically close different offices statewide for part or all of the day to conduct a uniform review of processes associated with this new identity protection program.

Connecticut currently requires all new applicants for driver licenses or DMV-issued ID card to have this identity verification. For both customer convenience and for any future federal purposes, DMV is extending the option now to all others who had a license or ID card prior to the agency starting verification for new applicants several years ago. The cost of the driver license or I.D. card renewals cards is the same whether identity is verified or not. (Regular license renewal for 6 years is $66; anyone 65 years old and older can renew for two years at $22; commercial driver's license renewal is every 4 years and is $60. DMV-issued ID cards are renewed for $22.50 for six years.)
